

Exterior Artificial Water Dragons

By TY Tan

I touched on the exterior natural water forms in my previous article. When there is an absence of exterior natural water forms, an exterior artificial water form can be created to activate wealth luck.

To build exterior water dragons, make sure that the water flow is orientated towards a door or a window of the house. Do not orientate it directly towards the main door. Make sure that there is an opening such as a door or window to welcome the water qi into the house.

Do not dig the locations occupied by the Grand Duke Jupiter, which are the Tai Sui, Three Killings (San Sha) and Five Yellow (Wu Wang), for doing so may bring about misfortune.

Also, place a dragon symbol by the side of your water feature to create powerful wealth qi.

Drains and Wells

Never allow exposed drains to completely dry up, for this weakens the sheng qi. The direction in which the water flows in drains around the house usually affects the wealth luck of the residents. If there are drains that flow in the wrong direction, build a wall to block the offending drain from view. When it is out of sight, it will not affect you.

Rounded or oval-shaped wells are preferred so that no poison arrows are created. The well should not be too small or too big, and may be covered by grills for safety. Water must be seen flowing into and out of the well without its view being blocked.

Waterfall

The size of a waterfall should be proportionate to the size of your house.

Artificially created water should not flow in a sharp 90-degree manner. It is good to have water that flows in a more rounded way without sharp angles and with a gentle waterfall.

Placing decorative plants near the waterfall is of added benefit. Make sure there are no obstructions, such as big rocks or a wall, which blocks the good qi from flowing into the house.

Note: A six-tier waterfall, which has six levels of water falling into a single pond, is a very auspicious water feature piece. Its design structure should have the water flowing towards the house (to enhance income) and ending in a deep, large fishpond (which is a wealth accumulator).

Water Fountain with Pond or Plain Pond

Do not let your fountain dominate the garden; otherwise, it will overwhelm you and it is harmful. Make sure the shape of your pond does not afflict you by pointing directly at your doorways. Build enough depth into your pond in order for wealth to last. Create yang energy for your pond by placing lights, having plants inside the pond, generating movement, rearing some goldfish or arowana and keeping the water clean.

Swimming Pool

The size of the pool should not overpower your house. It is best to keep the pool shape round or oval, as sharp corners that point towards your house can create sha qi. Swim in the pool daily to create yang energy.

If there is an absence of an exterior water form due to the lack of extra land or garden in your house, you can set up an interior water form to activate your wealth luck. In the next issue, I will touch on interior water forms.
